Does NOT Accept Commissions

With a stunning portfolio to his credit, potter Chris has been perfecting his art for the past 35 years in London, Ontario. His love for clay was sparked in high school at BealArt following which, Chris went on to study at Georgian College in Barrie. To date, he has worked in almost every facet of the pottery business. Teaching courses and workshops across the country, Chris has also completed numerous private commissions for everything from liturgical pieces to commemorative plaques and recognition awards.

Chris is currently the Director of Artistic Programming at the London Clay Art Centre. He also serves as past President for FUSION: The Ontario Clay and Glass Association, and he's also a Ceramics Professor at Lambton College in Sarnia, Ontario. Where he finds the time for all of his projects is anyone's guess. What cannot be questioned however, is his genuine passion for pottery and his exceptional craftsmanship.
